

Disability Support Workers Needed

Hands-on experience and study

- Be empowered to provide the best in disability support
- Work with NDIS participants to develop their life goals
- Looking to gain hands-on experience whilst studying?

We are looking for Disability Support Workers to cover ad-hoc shifts in the Sunshine Coast area for NDIS participants of all ages with a variety of presentations including complex mental health, physical and/or intellectual disability, and neurodivergent presentations such as ASD, ADHD, ADD and DCD.

Our staff provide personal care and community access to NDIS participants in the Brisbane, Moreton Bay, Sunshine Coast and Gold Coast areas. Our staff come from all walks of life and have a vast array of life experience – perhaps you are studying nursing, or teaching, an allied health discipline, or youth/social work, and are looking to gain valuable hands-on experience whilst studying; or maybe you have enjoyed a successful career in disability support and just want a few hours here and there?

If you have strong values around care, service, and personal development, and have a great ability to build trust-based relationships with those around you we would love to hear from you.

Alya are a registered NDIS provider of disability support services specialising in mental health, psychosocial disorders, neurodivergent, and complex physical and intellectual disability presentations. We are very proud to be one of only 15% of providers that are registered to provide support to NDIS participants.

Our support staff not only support our participants with in-home care and community access, they also work with them to develop their life goals - empowering participants to live a meaningful, beautiful, developing life.

Working at Alya gives you access to sector-leading professional and personal development programs, an empowering and respectful working environment, and your strong work ethic will be rewarded by remuneration above the support worker SCHADS (Social and Community Services) Award pay rates.

We look forward to welcoming you to the Alya team.
